POHLED ZÁPADNÍ (West View): This drawing shows the side facade of the house. It features a gabled roof with a tiled pattern. The facade includes several windows, some with shutters, and a central entrance area. Elevation markers on the right indicate heights of +11,500, +8,100, +7,400, +4,000, and ±0,000. A small detail '04' is shown on the roofline. The drawing is divided into sections by horizontal dashed lines.

Both drawings include a vertical grid line (A-F) on the left and a horizontal grid line (1-16) at the top. The drawings are oriented horizontally, with a vertical grid line (A-F) on the left and a horizontal grid line (1-16) at the top.
