This architectural drawing shows a front elevation of a classical door. The door is composed of two leaves, each featuring a large, multi-paned window (a six-over-six configuration) and a smaller, square panel below it. The door is framed by a simple, rectangular surround. Above the door is a large, semi-circular pediment. The pediment's interior is filled with a decorative, diamond-shaped lattice pattern, creating a fanlight effect. The drawing is a black and white line art, typical of architectural blueprints.
